INDEPENDENCE DAY

A Life-Saver Drowned—John D. Rockefeller on the Witness Stand—The Fate of C. B. Runyan.

New York, July 10.—As the years recede the grandest holiday in our Nation's life grows more sacred and precious. Fifty or sixty years ago it was thought by many pessimists that patriotism was dying out in our land, and that we were on the verge of that calamity that the English historian, Macaulay, prophesied, when republics like ours would perish and topple over like a house of cards. Little did he dream of the latent power and love of country that lay deeply anchored in the American heart, and which only needed threatened danger to the Nation's life to rouse it into action.

Casting aside all other claims of life, the patriots of our Civil War left home and friends and marched to defend and preserve our Nation's liberty and on the consecrated field of Gettysburg, on the Mississippi Grant, the Stars and Stripes to death or victory: tremendous was the sacred holocaust laid on Liberty's altar on that immortal battlefield; 100,000 of the flower of the Anglo-Saxon race faced each other in that terrible conflict. It took three days to decide the momentous question whether Liberty should survive or perish. The heart's blood of thousands of Freedom's champions from the north answered that question for all time when Lee, with his shattered and defeated army, crushed and broken-hearted, reeled back across the Potomac, never again, as a fighter, to set foot on northern soil. That day was doubtfully blest by Providence for the northern armies. While Gettysburg was doing in its glorious victory, on the Mississippi Grant, held Vicksburg, like a vice, and on the 4th of July, Pemberton, with a starving host that had not tasted food for two days, (having eaten all their horses and mules) marched out of Vicksburg and laid down their arms at the feet of the victor, Gen. Ulysses S. Grant.

This city the day was exceedingly quiet in comparison with former years. The youthful patriot, who generally secured a hearing, was in evidence long before daylight; his dad's old revolver, that looked as if it might have been a part of Noah's ark, was placed in commission and did some excellent service; the first dog brought down the butcher's bull-dog; the second, the large electric globe in front of Mulligan's saloon and the third took off Jimmie's left thumb as neatly as if it had been done with a butcher's knife; a red-headed cop then confiscated Jimmie's revolver and Jimmie was turned over to the Gerry Society for repairs.

A sad circumstance took place early in the week. One of the most eminent of the life-savers went into the water that he might afford protection to anyone who might need it; he swam out some distance and suddenly those on shore saw him throw up his hands; this was repeated twice; the hundreds who were looking on laughed at what they supposed to be his antics, but, with a last effort to call help he disappeared; the man was drowned.

The evidence of John D. Rockefeller in the witness-stand should be a matter of great interest to every man. Here is a man of more than ordinary ability who, without any special effort, surpasses all ideals of finance and by universal accord is said to be the richest man in the world. Whether he is the richest or not is a matter of very little moment; he has enough to excite the envy of his fellowmen and to prevent the howl of the wolf from being heard at his door. Viewing him from the standpoint that lies between poverty and millions, let us ask ourselves this potent question: After all its luxuries and envied accumulations, is it a very comfortable thing to be a very rich man? It's the vogue among millions of men to denounce the evils of riches and pronounce an unguilty of all sorts of crimes who have made a large fortune. What miserable rot is this? Who is there worthy of being known among his kind who does not seek for riches in fighting the battle of life? I do, and every honest man admits that he does the same. Poverty doesn't stand as a high endorsement of respectability. A man may be very poor and yet very good and respectable, but the rich man has the same opportunity without sacrificing a single right. The most astonishing evidence ever given on the witness-stand regarding the profits of a corporation was that told in court last week, during Mr. Rockefeller's examination that the profits of the Standard Oil Company for the last three years amounted to $200,000,000, of which Mr. Rockefeller held the largest share.

C. B. Runyan, the paying-teller of the Windsor Trust Company, must realize by this time that "the way of the transgressor is hard." Almost without an effort he had reached a position of honor and trust which assured him a decent competence for life. What could have induced him to leave his wife, his children and his home, and to rob the friends who had placed him in his very desirable position is beyond my ken. The manner (Continued on Fourth Page.)

She was a daughter of John and Sarah Reed and was born at St. Clairsville on July 3, 1847. On December 31, 1872 she was united in marriage with Daniel S. Allison who, with one son and three daughters, survives her: George H. Allison of Bedford township, Anna, wife of Harry Barefoot of Altoona, and Alice and Emily, at home. She also leaves four brothers.

Mrs. Allison was a member of the M. E. church of this place and was a kind and obliging neighbor and friend. In the absence of her pastor, Rev. Biddle, the funeral services, which were held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, were conducted by Rev. J. W. Lingle. Interment in the Bedford cemetery.

George W. Penrose

George W. Penrose, a former resident of this place, died at the home of his father-in-law at New Buena Vista on July 4, of stomach trouble, aged 45 years, eight months and 12 days. He was a son of Mahlon and Mary J. Penrose and was born at Fishertown October 22, 1861. His wife, who was Miss Katie Hochard, and two children, Herbert and Marie, at home, survive him. He also leaves a brother and two sisters: John W. and Mrs. Frank Naus, of Bedford, and Mrs. Charles Milburn of Cumberland.

Funeral services were held Saturday morning in St. Paul's Reformed church at Cessna, conducted by Rev. B. F. Bausman. Mr. Penrose was a paper hanger, which occupation he followed several years at Windber. Having been in failing health for several years, two months ago he entered a Johnstown hospital for treatment, which was of no avail. He held the esteem of a large circle of friends.

OLD HOME WEEK

AUGUST 4-10, 1907

The Executive Committee meets every Tuesday evening in the Bedford Athletic Association room in the Brode Building.

Subscription List

Previously acknowledged, $1-169.25; Dr. Albert S. Smith, $10; C. C. Irwin, $2; W. J. Beckley, $1; John C. Faint, $1; Charles Gilchrist, $1; Cash—M., 50c; total, $1,184.75.

While subscriptions have been coming in fairly well for the past week, the people generally have not been as prompt in their payments as was expected. Every person who subscribed should make a special effort to pay their subscription during this week, either to the Treasurer, E. H. Blackburn, or some member of the Finance Committee. There is so much work yet to be done that no one should make it necessary for a member of the Finance Committee to call upon them to collect their subscription. Attend to this most important matter at once, and by so doing show that you are taking an interest in Old Home Week.

Accommodations

One of the most difficult questions that Bedford will have to solve is that of accommodations for the large number of visitors we will have during Old Home Week. The Committee on Hotels and Boarding Houses, of which Jo. W. Tate is Chairman, have made considerable progress in their work of making a list of all persons who will have rooms to rent or who can board people during Old Home Week. If you have a room to rent or can board some one during that week, notify Mr. Tate, so that your name can be placed on his list, and help the Committee in their work to that extent.

The people of Bedford and Bedford county must remember that the success of Old Home Week depends largely on the aid they give the various committees in carrying out the program now decided upon.

Pull Together

Each committee has worked hard in the development of the particular part of the program assigned to them. Their part of the work will be done, but the difference between success and failure rests with the people of Bedford and Bedford county. Let each citizen determine that they will do all in their power to carry out the program arranged, and we will have the most successful celebration ever held in Bedford county, and one that we can all recall with pleasure.

Sons and Daughters Coming

Letters are being received from all parts of this great country showing that the absent sons and daughters of Bedford county are planning to greet each other during the Home Coming. They write from almost every state in the Union that they are coming home. Do you think that you would feel proud, if, through a failure on your part to do what you could to make the celebration a success, they returned to their homes disappointed?

Arc Lights All Night

At a meeting of the Bedford Electric Light, Heat and Power Company held Monday evening last, a resolution was passed agreeing to donate arc lights from 12 o'clock to daylight during Old Home Week.

Riding Tournament

John F. Brightbill, Chairman of the Committee for a Riding Tournament for Friday, August 9, desires all persons who wish to enter the tournament to notify him promptly so that he may make his arrangements accordingly.

Carload of Cots

A carload of cots has been ordered and will be placed on sale. Any one desiring to purchase any of these cots will make their wants known as promptly as possible to Jo. W. Tate, Chairman Committee on Hotels and Boarding Houses.

Queen of the Carnival

Forty-five candidates have so far received votes for Queen of the Carnival, and the contest wages merrily. There are contestants from all parts of the county, and at this stage of the contest no one can tell who the Queen will be.

In order to facilitate the work of counting the votes the Parade Committee announces that no votes will be counted for any candidate whose name has not been suggested on or before July 15th. The contest closes July 25th, at noon. The following young ladies have received the indicative number of votes for Queen of the Carnival:

Margaret Shuck, 351; Cora Walters, 302; Flora Colvin, 105; Nellie Ritchey, 50; Lucy McClure, 42; May Hartley, 31; May Arnold, 28; George Beckley, 12; Nannie Hughes, 12;

Hettie Barclay, 10; Rebecca Ritchey, 10; Nellie Leonard, 9; Minnie McIntyre, 8; Jennie Rowlands, 8; Margaret Gillespie, 8; Irene Corle, 8; Ruth Davidson, 7; Bessie Corle, 7; Josephine Smith, 6; Ocie Diehl, 6; Lena James, 4; Elnora Moyer, 3; Grace Shafer, 3; Mary Willoughby, 3; Mary Bair, 3; Nellie G. Oster, 3; the following have two votes each: Nellie Kerr, Bessie Blymyer, Edna Wertz, Sallie Henry, Jessie Spidel and Alice Price; one each: Elizabeth Metzger, Lizzie Diehl, Ida Colvin, Ruth Hartzel, Mae Bortz, Mary Colvin, Cora Hillegass, Bertha Williams, Mary Hammond, Louise Fyan, Goldie Corle.

Miss Margaret Statler, daughter of Dr. S. F. Statler, has withdrawn from the contest.

Veterans Will Be in Line

At the regular monthly meeting of Maj. William Watson Post, No. 332, G. A. R., it was decided to join in the parade on Order Day, August 6, and an invitation has been extended to other Posts of the county to join them.

P. O. S. of A. Address

He is charged with having committed upon Mary Mowry, a 12-year-old inmate of the almshouse, that crime that enrages communities and inspires mobs. The other two persons are George Morland and William McDonald. They were arrested in charge of having feloniously entered the H. & B. T. stations at Riddlesburg and Coal Dale of Harrisburg.

OLD HOME WEEK
"FOR QUEEN OF THE CARNIVAL"

Her Brilliant Failure

By Katherine Lewis

Copyright, 1906, by M. M. Cunningham

With chin uplifted and lips firmly compressed, Margaret advanced to meet fate.

Fate in this particular instance was represented by Margaret's father, a self-opinionated, self-made man with a grievance. Margaret realized fully that she was a factor in the grievance. Her three sisters constituted the remaining factors.

John Leckie felt that he had been played a scurvy trick when, having proved that he could surmount obstacles before which the average man fell back dismayed and could rise from nameless, penniless obscurity to a position of power if not popularity among men and affairs, nature had sent him daughters instead of sons. His wife had died of very shame for having failed so signally to fulfill her duty in this respect.

The eldest daughter had tried to expiate her mother's offenses by entering her father's office as bookkeeper. Today she ranked as his right hand man. She wore mannish clothes, too, and talked shop with her father from soup to coffee and was tremendously bored when her sisters proposed entertaining a few friends at dinner.

The second daughter had chosen art and had opened a small studio in a western city. Anything, in her estimation, was preferable to being told whenever she met her father that if she had been a man she might have built iron bridges instead of air-castles in art.

One thing John Leckie had done—he had given them the best educational advantages money could buy, and then he had said, "Now go out and do things."

Margaret, fresh from the trip abroad which Leckie considered the essential finishing touch of a girl's education, knew that she would be expected to "do things." Her father had given her time to unpack her trunks, to call on her few relatives and the intimate family friends and to recover her equilibrium, so to speak. Now, when he sent for her to join him in the library, she knew what his question would be. Nor was her surmise incorrect.

John Leckie leaned back in his un-stuffed leather chair and stared frankly at the tall, slender girl, who from some unknown and far distant ancestor had inherited a grace almost patrician.

"Sit down, Margaret. I've spent a good many thousand dollars on your education. What do you expect to do with it?"

"I think I shall take charge of the house," she said, calm, without quaking within.

"Take charge of the house?" echoed her father harshly. "I pay Mrs. Jenkins to do that."

"And the whole house looks as if it were handled by a hiredling," replied Margaret, meeting his angry gaze without flinching. "Bought! Hired! The words are stamped all over the place. We have no home life, no home atmosphere, and I want to make things more pleasant, more like some of the homes in which I have visited. I think that is my forte."

A deep purple flush mounted to Leckie's forehead, and his fist came down on the table with a ringing thump.

"So, after all the money I've spent on you, after all the plans I've made for my girls to take a place in the world as good as their father made for himself, you have no bigger ambition than to mend socks and bake pies. That will add to the luster of our family name, won't it?"

Margaret bit her lip. Leckie had spoken as if the name had been handed down through ten generations instead of one.

"Now, see here! That gag doesn't go. You're going to do something! Think of your sister Harriet!"

Margaret did think, and then she almost shuddered. She remembered Harriet's untidy room, some cigarette stubs she had seen lying on the unpolished brass tray. Harriet had said that after the long day in the office she simply had to smoke to quiet her nerves.

"Harriet is a credit to her father. Men down street call her a wonder. And you want to mend socks! Good heavens! Say, do you think you could sell goods? I'll start you in a millinery shop—a lot of society women are going in for that sort of thing—or a tea room, if you like. But you've got to do something."

Margaret rose and half timidly laid her arm around her father's thick neck. "Father, dear, I'd so much rather just make tea for you and your few friends. Perhaps we might have more friends if!"

He flung aside the encircling arm.

"Now, see here, you're not going to sit back on your haunches and do nothing just because I have money. You've got to make a name for yourself at something." He was brutal now in his disappointment. "If you can't do anything else, you can teach. I know a man; helped him out of a tight place about three months ago; name is Graydon. He lives somewhere out in Westchester county and is on the school board. He has pull enough to get you a job at teaching out there, and you can try your hand at that. If you can't earn five hundred a year giving out some of the education that I paid about five thousand a year for, you're a disgrace to the family. I'll see Graydon in the morning. School must open out there in a week or so."

He bent over his desk as if the sub-

"I'll do what you say, of course, father, but I warn you in advance that I will be a failure. I was not meant for that sort of thing."

Her father flung back his big head and stared at her.

"Perhaps you think you were born to play a lady, but I will fool you. You don't come from that sort of stock."

And so it happened that Margaret Leckie was placed in charge of district school No. 18. The one redeeming feature of her new position was the long walk to and from the depot, for she commuted daily rather than take board in the small village around which homes of millionaires were clustered. These long walks steadied her nerves for the labor of teaching the unkempt and insolent children of gardeners, coachmen and truck raisers who fell to the lot of school No. 18. She had spoken the truth when she said that she would fall. The power to organize and discipline children in numbers is not given to all, not even to the woman who by the magic talisman of maternal love may develop into a model mother in her own household. To the problems of undisciplined youth and unclean persons and untutored minds she gave the best energies at her command, but she worked with the sense of failure forever dogging her footsteps.

She was not surprised, therefore, when one particularly dull and lowering afternoon Mr. Graydon's motor car drew up at the schoolhouse. It was to be an investigation by a committee of one. She had felt it coming—ever since Billy Dobson had put red pepper on the stove and school had been dismissed for the afternoon. She rose, very straight and girlish and big eyed, as Homer Graydon entered the door. It was his first visit to the school, and she was surprised to find a clean cut, youngish looking man instead of the side-whiskered, portly personage she had somehow pictured this arbiter of her money earning fate to be.

Quite some time passed before he referred to the Billy Dobson incident, and Homer Graydon had taken measure of the woman before the matter came up for discussion. By this time Margaret was herself once more, and she did not strive to dodge the issue.

"There is no use talking about the matter, Mr. Graydon. I was not cut out for a schoolteacher. I know my limitations, but my father refuses to recognize them. There is only one thing I want to do, and he will not permit that."

She never knew how it happened, but before Homer Graydon left that schoolroom he knew what her simple ambitions encompassed, and he knew just how she would attain them.

The lowering clouds had lifted suddenly, the autumnal colorings on the trees shone in the sunlight, and his own heart sang in measure to the on-wind plume of his car. He was taking the unsuccessful schoolteacher to the depot in the village, and it was all he could do to refrain from telling her then and there what she had brought into his money grubbing life.

The world says that love at first sight lives only in novels and magazines. Homer Graydon says he knows better. John Leckie first said it was sheer laziness on Margaret's part, but sometimes when he goes to the cozy Graydon home and looks from the contented face of its mistress to the proud face of its master he wonders if it pays only "to do" things—when you're a woman.

HER DAY OF FREEDOM.

By ROSALIE DAVIS.

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague.

Grace Cramer received the news of her aunt's trifling illness with outward manifestations of regret and sympathy, but an inward feeling of exultation which she realized was, to say the least, ungrateful. Aunt Felice had been a patient, untiring, uncomplaining chaperon for one long week.

"Tell Mrs. Cramer I hope she will be feeling very much better when I come back from a drive. Is there anything I could bring her—violets or perhaps roses?"

"Madam cannot endure perfume of any sort when she has one of these attacks, but I shall tell her of your kind thoughtfulness," said the precise, black-gowned maid, who had been in Mrs. Cramer's service for fifteen years.

Well trained and capable was this maid, but it never dawned upon her that she should personally see that Mrs. Cramer's order for the carriage was executed. Certainly this sturdy young woman from the west, only daughter of Mrs. Cramer's only brother, looked as if she were quite capable of giving her own orders.

And so it happened that the butler, not without some misgivings, held open the big walnut and bronze doors for Grace to pass out half an hour later and watched her walk briskly down the avenue.

At Thirty-fourth street she paused uncertainly. There were several points of interest she really wanted to see before returning home—the statue of Liberty, the Metropolitan Museum of Art and Grant's tomb. Of course New Yorkers were always bored with such things, but Grace was from the west and frankly interested in sightseeing. And such a morning as it was for sightseeing!

In front of the Waldorf-Astoria stood a line of hansoms. With deliberate steps and keen glances she turned her feet in their direction. The cabbies looked at her expectantly—sharp featured English drivers, heavy-jowled and red-eyed Irish drivers, a couple who looked as if they had sprung from the ghetto and one who caught and held her glance, smooth and boyish of face, smart and well-groomed of coat and hat. She stopped and looked up into his face, shielding her eyes with her long flat purse.

"How much?"

"Where, miss?" said the driver courteously.

"Oh, I don't know just where—by the hour, I guess."

"One-fifty for the first hour, a dollar an hour after that."

"All right. And first we'll go to the museum in the park."

He touched the front of his hat with his gloved fingers, and some rude young men lounging near the carriage starter's booth laughed. Grace started. Perhaps she had better not. Then she glanced up at the young man on the box. His gloved fingers were still against his hat, the doors were invitingly open, and, though his face was quite grave, his eyes danced in a fashion very much in accordance with her own joy in being free from surveillance for a whole day.

She sprang into the hansom, and the doors clattered shut.

"How silly to be afraid!" she murmured. "Why, at home I go everywhere alone—and he is such a nice looking Irish boy."

"The nice looking Irish boy," gathering up his reins, turned his eyes on the group of rude laughing youths near the starter's booth, and in that look was a curious mingling of triumph and reproach.

They bowed through the park and drew up with a flourish in front of the museum. Grace sprang out.

"Oh, it is so much larger than I expected," she said, turning to the driver in frank surprise, not untinged with appeal. "I had no idea there was so much of it. You don't suppose I can begin to see it in half an hour or even an hour?"

The young man leaned respectfully from the box.

"Indeed you can't, miss. I've been here nearly every Sunday for the past three months, and I don't feel as if I'd seen the half of it yet."

"Oh, then you don't work on Sundays?"

The caddy flushed.

"After 6, miss. There's not much doing here on Sundays till dinner time."

"Do they have guides?" she said, waving her hand toward the museum.

"No, miss. But you can buy a catalogue."

"And spend all my time trying to figure out the catalogue. Goodness, everything is so big in New York! It appalls me." She took a step forward, then turned.

"I don't suppose—would you mind—if you could get some one to hold the horse—could you take me through? It would save so much time if you know the building, and then maybe I could see Grant's tomb too."

The young Irishman swung around on the box. Yes; there, a few rods away, was a policeman. He drove toward the officer, held a whispered conversation and in a few moments returned on foot, leaving the horse in care of a bright looking boy, with the sympathetic policeman in higher authority.

"You'll want to see the Vanderbilt loan collection, a few of the biggest and finest pictures and the Morgan jewels," he said. But they saw much more, and it was fully an hour and a half before they emerged from the museum.

"It isn't hard to see that you have spent your Sunday afternoons to good advantage," said the girl without a touch of patronage, and the young man looked at her gratefully.

"Once I thought I'd like to be a painter, but now—"

He signaled to the lad, who led up the horse.

"Ah," thought the girl as the doors closed in upon her, "probably has a poor mother and some little brothers and sisters to support."

At Grant's tomb he found another obliging youth to hold the horse, and he pointed out to her all the interesting features of the battle scarred relics in the crypt. He drove her out past Claremont and the viaduct, then lifted the window above her head and asked:

"Where next, miss?"

"Home, and I suppose you had better hurry. It is past lunchtime now. Fifth avenue."

The tiny window fell with a sharp click. The young man sat on the box so surprised that the girl in the hansom wondered why he had not obeyed her order to hurry. Then with a clatter they dashed down the drive.

"Three hours—that's three-fifty." She handed him a five dollar bill. "And please keep the rest for yourself. I've had such a beautiful time, and you showed me so much more than our own coachman could have done."

The young Irishman bent low to hand her some change.

"I beg pardon, miss, but I belong to an association, and members are not allowed to take more than a quarter for a tip. Now, if you happened to have a silver quarter, particularly a nice shiny quarter, I'd—"

Grace fingered the change in her long blue purse and triumphantly drew out a brand new quarter which glistened in the clear winter sunshine.

"I don't suppose I could have your hansom tomorrow if I?"

"I'm sorry, miss, but I don't know where I will be sent tomorrow. You see, we're posted at different points different days."

"Well, he is the most human thing I've met in this frosty old town," said the pretty westerner to herself as she touched the electric button.

The Ernest cotillon was at its height. Mrs. Cramer, quite recovered from her illness, watched in radiant triumph the success her husband's niece was scoring.

"Brimming over with personality, don't you know," murmured an old beau, nodding over Mrs. Cramer's shoulder at the lovely girl in her dancing frock of silver gauze. "Actually enjoying herself, isn't she?"

Just then to a rattling two-step half a dozen young men pranced into the room, clad in coaching coats and hats made of paper and carrying long whips, which they snapped as they circled round the great room.

"The horse show figure—how clever!" murmured Mrs. Cramer. "And I hear the favors are exquisite silver brooches and buckles pinned on blue ribbons."

Just then one of the dancers paused before her niece and raised his high paper hat. He was a smooth faced chap, with blue eyes that twinkled merrily into the astonished face of the girl.

"Why, I thought you were!"

"I was for one day," he said as he led the dazed girl into the mazes of the dance. "An election bet I had to settle, and you came along just in the nick of time."

"And you said that you wanted to be a painter?"

"So I did," he maintained stoutly. "You'll at least admit I know something about art."

She nodded her head, but flung him a reproachful glance.

"Well, my father decided that I ought to help him build railroads instead; that's all."

"If you can drive spikes as straight as you drive a hansom?"

"It was rather a jolly morning, eh?" he said, with a chuckle. "My, but the boys were sore! They hoped I'd get some old girl on shopping bent, who would keep me outside the shops, where I'd meet everybody I knew, but you rescued me in that park drive."

He was handing her the dainty silver favor, and then he thrust his fingers into his vest pocket and drew out a quarter.

"That's a little the best favor that ever came my way. I am going to keep it!"

"Till you have another fare?"

He turned grave.

"As long as I live."

"I am going home tomorrow," she remarked irrelevantly.

"How odd! And I am going to Denver on business. Great luck, and I guess we've proved that we don't require a chaperon."

WHERE THE MONEY WENT

The Auditor General's report for 1905, which was made public this week, shows that for contracts in addition to their original contracts George F. Payne & Co. received $309,256.13; The Pennsylvania Construction Co. was paid $410,884.30 for metallic furniture, and John H. Sanderson & Co., Philadelphia, got $1,980,661.71 for furniture, decorations, etc.

Such is the report of the Auditor General who is in charge of the books of the state and it is no doubt accurate. But if some auditor should go over the books of the above-named companies he would no doubt find further distribution of those gigantic sums. It would be interesting to know of the subdivision and the sub-subdivisions, for it is not improbable that part of it was put to uses which the Machine under which the fabulous sums were obtained would not want brought to light.

AT THE HAGUE

The Peace Conference now in session at The Hague on Wednesday went into a rather extended discussion of the American Proposition regarding the restriction of naval warfare. The Spanish, Dutch, Russian and Italian delegations agreed to the American idea with regard to bombardment as embodied in the following six articles:

First—The commander of a fleet must spare historical monuments, churches and buildings used for artistic, scientific or benevolent purposes, and hospitals, on the condition that they are not used for military purposes and are designated by special signs, which must be displayed by the inhabitants.

Second—Before beginning the bombardment of a town the commander of a fleet must do all in his power to inform the authorities of the town of his intentions.

Third—Pillage is forbidden, even in a town or locality taken by assault.

Fourth—The bombardment of undefended ports, towns, villages or buildings is forbidden, but any military work existing in otherwise undefended places can be bombarded if the local authorities refuse to destroy it.

Fifth—Undefended places can be bombarded if they refuse to furnish a fleet with necessary provisions.

Sixth—The bombardment of a town or village for refusal to pay a ransom is prohibited.

These articles must necessarily commend themselves to all possessed of the altruistic spirit that ought to predominate in nations—collections of individuals—as well as among individuals. The application of the principle that "might makes right" by armies and navies in times past has caused useless suffering and death. Towns have been razed to the ground, communities devastated and inhabitants either killed or made penniless simply because armies and navies could practice their arts according to their power and regardless of right or suffering.

Historical monuments have in times past been ruthlessly battered to pieces and works of art have not been spared by war's iconoclastic hand. Sacred edifices and benevolent institutions have shared a like fate and thus has the progress of the world been retarded.

The forbidding of pillage even in towns and localities taken by assault is a step humanity-ward for this very privilege has often led to useless bombardment.

The demanding of ransoms followed by a threat of bombardment has caused coast towns to impoverish themselves, hence the last article which prohibits bombardment from following a refusal of a town or community to comply with an unreasonable demand for money or munitions of war is most commendable.

MERVINE PARDONED

Seven and One-Half Years of Sentence Cut Off By Board.

On Tuesday of this week, E. M. Pennell, Esq., presented to the Board of Pardons in Harrisburg the application of Templeton Mervine of this place, for pardon, and, on the same day, petition met with the approval of that board, and Mervine is restored to liberty.

The reasons assigned in the petition were: first, that the sentence was unusual, excessive and out of proportion to the offense committed; second, that the defendant had already suffered punishment sufficient to atone for the offense; and third, the dependent character of Mervine's wife and four little children. This petition was supported by letters from a number of the most prominent and influential people of the community, and the action of the board in pardoning the prisoner will be met with general commendation.

On the night of December 23, 1904, the smoke-house at the Waverly Hotel was entered and two small hams, two fitches and a roll of butter were stolen. The same evening five plugs of tobacco and several pounds of candy were stolen from the grocery store of the late John O. Smith.

The following morning search warrants were sworn out and the goods found at Mervine's home. The defendant had been drinking liquor and made no attempt to conceal the stolen goods or to escape the responsibility for his crime. He waived a hearing, was committed to jail, and, on the 16th of January, 1905, pleaded guilty to two indictments charging him with stealing goods of the value of $23. The following day the court imposed a sentence in the two cases of ten years in the Western Penitentiary. At the time the offense was committed, Mervine was living with his wife and three children, the eldest nine years of age, in the West ward of Bedford borough, and two days before he was sentenced to the penitentiary the fourth child came to the home. The wife has kept the family together by means of her earnings over the wash tub and contributions from friends, and the children of sufficient age have received the benefit of training in the public schools and in one of the Sunday schools in the town.

At the time the sentence of ten years was imposed, every person conversant with the facts was surprised at its severity. The prisoner made no complaint and his record at Allegheny has been a model for obedience to the rules of the institution.

Templeton Mervine's weakness has been that of most of the men who fill our prisons, an over-indulgence in intoxicating drinks. Except for a spree, it is probable that the crimes for which he was incarcerated would not have been committed. He is a competent house painter, and now, that he has been restored to his wife and children, it is hoped that he will appreciate their faithfulness and devotion in the time of his trouble and the good will shown him by the men who brought about his pardon. He is and can be a highly useful citizen, when not under the influence of liquor, and has a useful future if he will but shun evil companions and abstain from intoxicants of all kinds.

His misfortune is an example for all young men. Indulgence in the liquor habit invariably leads to sorrow and shame. There is no middle course for the young man who would be safe. He must totally abstain or perpetually run the gauntlet.

The Gazette congratulates him on his pardon and wishes for him a prosperous and useful life in the bosom of his family. For him, liquor is a demon, and indulgence, even in a moderate form, is an invitation for trouble.

BROADBRIM'S BUDGET

in which the robbery was committed sinks him to the level of a vulgar thief. It was done for the companionship of a common street-walker, for whom he had taken a cosy flat-house and to whom he gave thousands and thousands of stolen dollars. This base companion whom he picked up seems to have had some spark of sentiment for when she learned that he had abandoned a family she became so disgusted with his treachery that, bad as she was, she betrayed him to the police in the hope of getting the $20,000 offered for his capture. What a lesson! Here is a man who might have been honored and could have achieved high success in life, who chose the base part and now may die in a felon's cell.

FOREIGN ATTACHMENT

A Test Case of Interest to Lawyers of the State.

Attorney B. F. Madore has issued a foreign attachment against The American Law Book Company of New York to recover $115.82, the value of part of a set of law books known as the "Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure." This proceeding is of much interest to the legal fraternity of Pennsylvania as it is proposed to determine by it whether the American Law Book Company has the right to rescind a contract when it is only partially completed, the agreement giving neither party the right to rescind. Mr. Madore has a copy of the agreement. Some time ago he sold the volumes of "Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure" which he had already received, and the remainder of the books were to be shipped to the purchaser as fast as they were received from the American Law Book Company. Having learned of the sale of the books by Mr. Madore, the American Law Book Company refuses to send him any other volumes under the contract. If the American Law Book Company has the right to act arbitrarily in this matter, then should any subscriber die before the completion of the set of the "Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure," whatever he had paid would be a loss to his estate, an incomplete set having no value. There are five subscribers for the books in Bedford and all are interested in the final result of the suit.

MEDICAL SOCIETY

Holds Interesting Session—Resolutions Adopted.

The Bedford County Medical Society met in regular session last Wednesday afternoon in the court house in Bedford. Those present were Dr. Walter Trimball, Pres.; Dr. Walter de la Mill, Sec.; Dr. Ed. L. Smith, Treas.; and Drs. W. P. S. Henry, B. F. Hunt, S. G. Statler, William Nycum, W. F. Enfield and S. H. Gump.

After a discussion of medical subjects a resolution was offered that a committee be appointed to revise the fee bill, and to communicate with all the physicians in Bedford county for the purpose of organizing an association to collect accounts due, and to protect themselves against "dead-beats," a list of which will be made and published in the near future.

The following resolutions were adopted: Whereas, It appears by common consent that upon the Medical Profession are enjoined the performance of so many arduous and important duties toward the community and that they are required to make many sacrifices of comfort, ease and health for the welfare of those who avail themselves of their services; and after a careful consideration of existing conditions, which are detrimental to the good of the public and unjust to physicians; when, as we find, upon careful comparison of notes that we are being imposed upon by numerous parties who ask our services at all times, without any intention or desire to compensate us for the same, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we physicians refuse to attend those whom the members of this association report to the secretary as belonging to this class, unless said parties make satisfactory arrangements with the physician to whom they are indebted or, in an emergency, pay the physician upon whom party is before the call shall be made.

That we shall not forget the worthy and needy poor and nothing in these resolutions shall be construed as preventing any member from attending the worthy poor at a less rate or to give free services to those who are too poor to pay anything.

The doctors say they are compelled to take action as above stated because many persons, who are able to do so, persistently and systematically attempt to evade payment of their bills and it is to get rid of this class of practice that they are organizing.

Ministerium Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Reformed Ministerium of Bedford county was held at the National House, this place, at 1:30 o'clock, Monday afternoon. Those present were Rev. Dr. Walter E. Krebs of Littlestown, Rev. C. J. Musser, editor of "The Messenger," of Philadelphia, Revs. C. W. Warlick, C. F. Althouse, J. W. Zehring, C. Gumbert, C. W. Sumney and B. F. Bausman. A number of ladies also attended the session.

Dr. Krebs delivered an excellent address on the "Immortality of the Soul," and an able sermon was read by Rev. Warlick on "Let there be light; and there was light." The next meeting will be held at the National House on Monday, September 2.

BEDFORD PIANO CLUB

Readers Excellent Program at Home of Mrs. A. T. G. Apple.

One of the most successful musicals ever given by the Bedford Piano Club was that held at the home of Mrs. A. T. G. Apple Thursday evening, June 27.

The spacious parlors were converted into a veritable bower with flowers and evergreens, roses and southern magnolia bloom predominating. The program, as given below, was faultless in its rendition and in its grade maintained the high standard adopted by this worthy organization. At the close of the stated program refreshments were served and a social hour followed, which will long be remembered by those present.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

In this column will be published weekly one or more selections of poetry or prose, selected from many sources and from best authors.

THE LONG AGO

There's a beautiful isle in the long ago
All flooded with golden light,
And a river that flows by the shelving shore
Whose waters are wondrous bright;

There's a bark which glides with a snowy sail,
And the dip of a silver oar,
And it carries us back to the shining gates
Of that beautiful past once more;

Ah! every heart holds some sweet dream
Of the days that have gone before.

There were bright hopes roused in the long ago,
Sweet dreams were gathered there,
And the walls of this beautiful past are hung
With many an image fair;

And oh! there is room for the feet to tread
This path of the bygone years,
There are joys that bloom in memory's fields,
And a fount for our bitter tears,
And a grave in which we have garnered up
All the old-time hopes and fears.

There are beautiful dreams the heart holds dear,
Bright dreams of the long ago,
And sacred tears for the perished hopes
That will never return—ah no!

And thus the tangled web of life we weave our smiles and our tears;
Yet the soul has its holy memories
That cling to the parted years—
Ah! drop the silken curtain now
O'er the old-time hopes and fears.

Shut out the light of the long ago,
Close the door of the past again,
And stifle the yearning thoughts that fill
The bosom with so much pain;

Then roll the ponderous stone against
The tomb that is dug in the heart,
For why should these buried forms
Once more

To life and beauty start?
The future may hold some dreams as bright,
That will not soon depart.

OUR DAILY BREAD

A beggar boy stopped at a rich man's door—
"I am homeless and friendless and faint and poor,"
Said the beggar boy, as the tear-drop rolled
Down his thin cheek, blanched with cold.

"Oh, give me a crust from your hoard today,
To help the beggar boy on his way?"
"Not a crust, not a crumb," the rich man said,
"Be off and work for your daily bread."

The rich man went to the parish church;
His face grew grave as he trod the porch;
And the thronging poor, the untaught mass,
Drew back to let the rich man pass.

The service began; the choral hymn arose and swelled through the long aisles dim;
The rich man knelt and the words he said,
"Give us this day our daily bread!"

Minister in Need

Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Barney, of Clearville, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on Tuesday, July 16. These 50 years have been spent in preaching the gospel and during that time Rev. Barney received so small a compensation for his services that every dollar was required for the support of his family. He was, therefore, unable to provide for old age; his voice and health have failed and he is no longer able to preach.

Rev. Morgan of the M. E. church made him a present of $5. Any amount which our readers may feel like giving toward the support of an afflicted minister, will be gratefully received by Rev. Joseph Barney, Clearville, Pa.

Barn Raising

On Tuesday Charles D. Hershberger of near Cessna raised his new bank barn, the building being 40 by 80 feet. Grant and Chris. Dibert, the hustling barn builders of Bedford township, were the contractors. So well did the work proceed that the rafters were in position by noon and much of the weatherboarding was on. One hundred four persons partook of the sumptuous dinner prepared by Mrs. Hershberger.

July Burr McIntosh

Among the special features of the July Burr McIntosh Monthly, which is now on all news stands, are a number of exquisite panoramic views of different parts of France, a reproduction of the best paintings shown at the 40th Annual Exhibition of the American Water Color Society in New York, these reproductions being shown in an unusual shade of art color. An interesting article on salmon fishing in the northwest showing a number of extraordinary photographs appears under the title of "Where Swims the Sock-Eye."

Among the portrait reproductions are very fine pictures of Grace George, Margaret Bucklin, Fanny Ward Lewis, Adelaide Keim, Lillian Kingsbury and Doris Keane, all prominent people of the stage. The color work of this July number is especially suited to the season and is most exquisite in its daintiness. Burr Publishing Company, New York.

THE URBAN MUTUAL

The Urban Mutual Insurance Company of this place was organized four years ago by Walter F. Moore and a few others familiar with the scheme of practical underwriting. The purpose in the organization of this company was to enter an effective protest against the ever-increasing rate of insurance premiums by the Stock Companies and, further, to demonstrate that people in country towns were being charged an unjust rate, either to swell the profits of the stockholders or else to bear an undue proportion of the burden of those communities where the loss ratio is heavier than in country towns.

What the Urban started out to do it has accomplished. It began business with $200,000 of insurance in force and at the end of four years, as shown by its books it had, in round numbers, insurance in force to the amount of $1,400,000.

The cost for all purposes to the assured during that period has just been two-fifths of what it would have been in stock companies, making a saving to its policy holders of sixty per cent.

The insurance departments of the several states treat the Premium Notes of Mutual Companies the same as they do the cash assets of stock companies and, on this basis, in point of financial strength the Urban is the superior of any Stock Company, as its assets equal $52.00 to every $1000 of liability, while the assets of the leading Stock Companies vary from $10.00 to $18.00 to every $1000 of liability.

The people of this community should rejoice over the success of the "Urban," because it has made a great saving to those who patronized it, because its record had the effect of keeping the stock rates from advancing to a still higher figure in this county, and because it had the effect of reducing the rates on certain lines.

It is manifest to the most unskilled that mutual insurance is bound to be cheaper, because it avoids the dividends to stockholders and the large expense to which stock companies are subjected.

Long live and prosper the Bedford "Urban." A Member.

Prompt and Satisfactory.

Mr. J. Roy Cessna, Bedford, Pa.

I wish to extend my most sincere thanks to you, in behalf of the Great Eastern, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of claim on policy taken out with you while in Clearville, before leaving for college.

And I highly recommend the company to anyone as a good protection I am,

Yours very truly

J. ROY CESSNA,

DOWN IN DIXIE

M. P. Heckerman Finds Hot Weather, and a Good Hotel.

Fort Valley, Ga., July 8, 1907.

The peach crop hereabouts is about over; but few of the late varieties remain.

The county of which this is the county seat and has the court house, where they deal out 'injustice to many, is the thought of all who do not win. Now, about the fruit. This county has forty thousand acres in peaches and five thousand acres in pears, most of which are the La Conta pear. Express shipments of peaches to the various markets north began June 12, and about the 25th all shipments by express ceased and full cars were sent out; even whole train loads left here each day, not only for the north but the south. New Orleans bought and had shipped them 2,000 cases between June 12th and 20th. The price paid was, at the orchard, $1.75 per case. Marshallville sent out a car on June 20 of the celebrated Carman variety and got $3.50 per case for the whole 550 cases. Most of the fruit in this section has passed out of the growers' hands. Canners here have paid as much as $1 per bushel for peaches, taking the fruit from the orchard and this makes big money for the grower.

While at Charlotte, N. C., the other day I went to hear Carrie Nation talk on temperance. I tell you she is a rattler from the wild, woolly west that was. She said during her speech that President Roosevelt was a villain and that Bryan was a coward. Such language did her no good. She was for a poor man's President, she said.

On July 4th at High Point I saw my first air ship. It was invented by a genius there and was used in their big parade which was quite a credit to the furniture town. It may well be called a furniture town since it has 65 furniture manufacturers within the corporate limits. Here they make the cheapest as well as the most expensive furniture.

July 4th was a warm one down here. Mercury ranged about 90 all day, not a cloud in the sky and but little ice water to cool one's thirst. I stayed close to Hotel Gordon, North Wilkesboro, N. C., and by so doing did not suffer from the heat. I tell you this hotel is a godsend to the poor traveler in this section. It is owned and your needs are all watched over by Mrs. Lennell, who is well adapted to the business. The rooms are clean and the table has an abundance of well-cooked food and the boys all voice the same sentiment as to the best place to stop while in North Wilkesboro, for "a man's life is full of crosses and temptations; he comes into this world without his consent and goes out of it against his will." The road is rocky but man loves to travel it. The life of a traveling man is made very much easier by patronizing the Hotel Gordon, North Wilkesboro, N. C., which is one of the most thriving towns in the state.

When one sees the very many ox, mule and horse teams that throng the square about F. D. Forrester's wholesale house, each eager to unload its load of produce or barks and herbs that grow out in the mountains near by and trade these things for groceries and peanuts, one would think Forrester did a million of business a year, and no doubt he does.

Oh, how I would like to know something about Old Home Week. You forgot to send me The Gazette as requested last week, hence I am in total darkness; however, we will have the time in our history at Old Home Week and "you all" better cut your grass and weeds, and cart away your stuff an' dig yer dirt an' plant some seeds before you take yer rest.

Better keep your back yard neat, an' sweep your sidewalk clean, an' not throw trash in the street. An' have John call you mean; Yer better get to cleanin' up, an' mind what you're about. Or Mayor Jordan will get you if you don't watch out.

Well, well, I declare; but it is true, yet it is for I have the proof of it. My diary shows that I have had 'steamed rice every day for dinner since May 17th; in fact no southern dinner is considered complete without steamed rice, and their southern cooks know how to fix it, for while it is soft and well-done, yet it is not all in a mush; the grains are perfect and do not all adhere together. Again I have had string beans boiled with ham hock for 20 dinners in succession, and chicken, well, that has been served every day since the peepies left their mother and sometimes three times a day. Many times it was served swimming in fat half an inch deep. Oh, I must not forget the corn bread which is made from white corn flour, salt and water and baked quickly in chunks or any old way that suits the cook. Just how these southern people can eat and relish this heavy mixture, called cornbread, I don't know. They laugh at me when I ask for baker's bread. Some will say, "Boss, does yer want loaf bread?" and give it other names while each and every waiter will say, "Boss, how does yer want yer eggs?" I mostly say one fried on one side and one on the other.

While we have right much hot weather down this way yet I have not suffered and keep trudging along with mercury registering ninety-six about as well as I can at home, where I hope to be very soon.

AT WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS

Capt. A. E. Schell Spends Fourth at Historic Resort.

A quarter of a century ago White Sulphur Springs was the mecca for invalids and the writer for two score years has drunk freely of the water. In the days ago the sparkling water gushed out into a rude wooden box and none of the modern hotel accommodations were to be found, yet many guests gathered around the pure fountain with their silver cups and golden goblets to drink of its flood.

How often I listened to the young ladies from Washington and Baltimore who were carried away with the grandeur and sublimity of the rugged mountains, forests and the tiny mountain brook leaping from rock to rock!

A moment's reflection brings back from memory sad thoughts of bygone years—times when I sat around on rocks and logs at nature's wild summer resort.

Today the Springs Hotel, an elaborate structure for the accommodation of guests, hemmed in by mountainous elevations, stands where picnic parties once gathered about festival boards.

Today a jolly party of picnickers from Schellsburg are enjoying the mountain environment.

I have met many interesting guests, two in particular: one, who visited my sister, Mrs. Ankeny, in Minneapolis and Colonel Young, a genial gentleman of four-score-and-four, who has held many prominent positions of trust under Uncle Sam.

Simon McCreary is the champion snake killer of our vicinity so far this season. On Thursday, while working on a clearing belonging to Samuel Mowry, Mr. McCreary discovered a large black snake. After throwing a stone at the reptile it crawled into a large rotten log. He at once armed himself with a hand spike and pried the log apart. To his surprise he saw four, all curled up; immediately a fight ensued but by his activity he succeeded in killing all four. The first measured 6 feet 4 inches, the second 5 feet 8 inches, the third 4 feet 6 inches, and the fourth 4 feet. Simon says "It made a lively time but I gained the day by the well aimed strikes with my hickory pry."

Although the congregation has been without a pastor for some time, through the efforts of Rev. E. L. Keller, their pastor during his vacation, good work is being done.

Well, it was entertaining to hear those two old comrades talking over their prison experience. Mr. Ream also visited Comrade John C. Ealy and had a handshake with David H. Darr, the company cook. SOUTHERN MONTANA

A Country That Robs Poverty of Half Its Terror.

While recently visiting my son, at the head waters of the Missouri river, we found much of interest in the bleak, brown, barren hills of this region. Every mining camp and every stock range has a story, a story in the telling of which there are two distinct methods. One includes only its resources, the things that are present today, and will increase or decline tomorrow. The other is misty, intangible, historical, a hovering phantom whose presence is not visible, but which is nevertheless always there, an influence not to be avoided. The great motive in men's affairs through the boundless west fifty years ago was the gold mines. Twenty-five years later it was represented by the homestead and the stock ranch. The romance of the Montana miner is one of the most thrilling in history. Men are living who took part in it, yet it has gone into history as a distinct romance, but illy to be spared from the story of western progress.

For a unique mingling of some of the most pleasant sensations of life, commend me to the village of Redrock, Montana. You will not find its equal for many a league. It stands in a most productive valley of a land whose barrenness and whose fertility, lying side by side, have given rise to two distinct opinions. Looking out of its embowment, mountains fence it on every hand, and shimmering in changeless sunshine a huge patch of snow looks down on it in June. The old red road winds away among the hills, following the Lewis and Clark trail for many miles. It is often grown across with coarse herbage, and having the air of melancholy. The deserted pathways of men are all through these mountains. The growth of shrub, and weed, and briar are striving to hide the scars and gashes made by the pick and shovel of forty years ago. Old fumes have rotted and fallen and still lie strewn in the ravines across which they once carried so many miners' inches of water every day. Even here and there old cabins lean and rot, mementos of the womanless and childless little homes. Old dams lie in the streams; old stage bridges preserve still a timber here and there at either end. At one point we found the rust-eaten blade of a large knife at the mouth of an excavation. There are graves, too, dimly discernible but still to be known as the long ago forgotten resting-place of some lone miner.

There are little towns built in gulches and straggling up hillsides, which long ago saw their last inhabitant depart and where now no one ever comes. Their hilarious nights have not left an echo or their reckless days a sign. This was one of the most terrible forms of mountain life less than forty years ago, and there are left now only the dimmest signs of it amid the mountain silence and shadows. Every reflective man

PHYSICIAN FINDS

ECZEMA CURED

Prescription of Dr. D. D. Dennis Heals the Skin—Many Cures Reported.

The medical world is stirred by the great number of eczema cures now being effected with the method discovered by a prominent skin specialist, Dr. D. D. Dennis of Chicago. Several years ago Dr. Dennis announced to the medical world that when the skin is diseased it is curable through the skin alone, and that if the patient is in good health otherwise, it is nonsense to dose the stomach of a person suffering from eczema, psoriasis, or any kindred ailment.

Dr. Dennis compounded a prescription of vegetable mixtures, perfectly harmless, soothing and refreshing to the skin, and quickly eradicating the disease. This prescription has now been put up in bottles and may be secured direct from drug stores.

Many wonderful reports have been coming in from all parts of the country and some right from this city as to the remarkable cures effected by Dr. Dennis' prescription, especially when it is used in connection with Dr. D. D. soap. This paper is able today to print the following:

"I am pleased to be able to inform you that two bottles of your Prescription have effected complete cure of the eczema which I have suffered on the soles of my feet for several years that was contracted in South Florida."—M. B. Henry, 429 Watkins Street, Augusta, Ga.

The Dr. D. D. Prescription may be had at Jordan's drug store. Call and investigate—no one is urged to buy. F. W. Jordan, Bedford, Pa.

must have his moments of looking back and his wholesome private reflections upon the theme of what a fool he has been in his time. Of these philosophers the boundless west is full, for those who endured the most, now have the least.

It may be slightly too strong an impression to say that the miner, who remained in southern Montana, lived in a state of chronic surprise. Before he came he regarded it as the land of gold; after he had reached the place he remained under that idea. The fever grew and reached its climax and declined, and he still thought and said that the country was good for nothing else. When the early times were gone, the gulches were deserted, the placers had played out, leads had petered, and his chances were gone, he slowly awoke to the fact that Montana was not the land of gold at all and that the real wealth was in the soil. The small farmer, known as the tenderfoot, came from Kansas and Iowa and seized upon the opportunities he had neglected, and filled up the country he had expected to see deserted. They diverted his fumes and ditches and turned the sage-brush and chaparral into fields and farms. It was not the country of camps, but of towns; not of wild oats of either the natural or artificial variety, but of hay and grain. And as time passed the deception grew worse and worse. The desert put in its claims.

The country which the early miner never visited, the edge of the yellow and gray expanse that had killed of thirst, and dust, and hunger so many of his companions who only tried to hasten across it, began also to bloom. Cities sprang up beside the irrigating ditch and contained more inhabitants than all the miners ever numbered. The waste and lone some acres began to have a value greater than they would have had if they had been staked off as mining claims. The home-maker came with enthusiasm and some cash. At first the old miner calmly awaited the miserable failure of all this wilderness and knew, as one does who has had experience, that the world had to a large extent gone crazy or mad, and counseled with his few remaining fellows as to the signs of the times. It is not to be denied that sometimes he also partook of the benefits accruing, in cases where, for a quarter of a century or more, he had been the owner of lands he never really wanted and hillsides that came to him by chance. Where he drifted into southern Montana because there was nowhere else to go, or for some similar reason, he often awoke to find himself well-fixed somewhat late in life. Go where one will through this new state, here and there will be found this grizzled memento of the old days. Perhaps you may find him sitting in the hotel at Dillon engaged in a social game of cards, or you may find him at one of the best hotels in Butte, a man with a wide slouch hat, a splendid gray beard, and a look of prosperity. In common with all Saxon frontiersmen, the old miner is a man misplaced in these times, but in his day he was the true representative of that sturdy valor which is now decaying in wealth and luxury. There will be no more of him while the world stands, and his name in the country whose hills he first scarred with his toil, is overwhelmed in modern wonder.

While cowboy life has all but passed away, one may see them yet in wide sombreros and leather trousers. The ranches around Redrock and Dillon are conducted after modern fashion. Every ranch has as much land in cultivation as in pastures, and the erstwhile cowpuncher is following the plow and driving the self-binder or mower these days. In this country one finds a curious arrangement of classes. The towns are settled by men whose deeds of daring would make complete novels of reckless adventure, while beside the frontier characters are found the mildest of tenderfoots, the most noted redskins and the shrewdest business men. It I made a comprehensive map of Montana, I should mark off this remote corner with a red circle around Redrock, as being the only spot on the continent where, even under peculiar conditions, no more inhabitants are wanted, no more business places are needed, and no more lots would be sold. Lured by the modern price of ranch land, and excited by the prospects of a climate and country that robs poverty of half its terror, the average American who came to heal his lungs or his fortune, has become an enthusiast for Montana.

There is another epoch which must of necessity be described by a word which culture condemns and refinement refuses to recognize. It is the period of the boom. The time has not come for any description of this, though its results are seen on every hand. It is a period when the most brilliant exploits of financiering, the wildest dreams of speculation, the most extravagant pretensions are covered by an accomplishment heretofore marked only by the lapse of years. Nature has made Montana the treasure house of the northwest. Enterprise and race have turned it into a hive whose hum is ceaseless. A. Decker.

Have you noticed how very narrow some of the new belts are which come on the suits? They scarcely more than conceal the tiny bands of the skirts.

Let it get very hot, stir in half a cupful of cream, remove from the fire, and add a beaten egg just before serving. If the cream is whipped it is more delicate.

WIN SUCCESS IN NURSING

The Best Paying Occupation—Free Scholarships.

Nursing the sick is perhaps the most attractive field for the ambitious woman who would win success and make the most of life. It is a refined occupation. It gives skill to the hand and grace to the heart. It is the best paying occupation now open to women, and presents an ever-widening field of opportunity. The call for nurses is a world-wide call. It is the one calling which is not over-crowded.

The demand for skilled nurses increases with the years. Thousands of young women have the natural graces of the skilled nurse, but have never had a chance to cultivate them, and so have been prevented from improving their own condition and blessing the race. But a new day has dawned. Large hearted philanthropists have opened wide the door of opportunity at the Philadelphia School for Nurses, 2219 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. A Two Years' Free Course has been established at this institution, wherein the student is provided with room, board, laundry, nurse uniforms, and all the refinements of a good home, with suitable training, instruction and actual nursing in the homes of the poor and among people of moderate income, and at the end of the Course the student's fare home is paid.

The Term can be shortened to eighteen months by a Course of six months' reading and study at home—a course which is very valuable in itself. Hundreds of young women, scattered all over the country, are started in the work, becoming not only self-supporting, but a boon to their respective neighborhoods.

A Short Course is also provided for the woman who wishes to quickly prepare for self-support and a substantial income. Enrollment is now in progress for a class of four hundred students in the Resident Courses next year. Young women from the smaller towns and country districts are favored in the distribution of scholarships, with a view of conveying hospital knowledge to all rural communities.

DON'T DIE AT 45

Cure the Indigestion Which Is So Liable to Lead to Apoplexy.

People who suffer with headache, giddiness, palpitation, bad taste in the mouth, drowsiness, distress after eating, and any of the other distressing results of indigestion, are in serious danger. Their digestive organs cannot care for the food properly and hence the coats of the blood vessels in the brain get little nourishment, become brittle, and finally yield to the fierce blood pressure and one is then said to have a "stroke," be paralyzed, or die from apoplexy.

In all diseases of digestion and nutrition the prescription called Mi-o-na has proven itself of great value. It is relied upon today as a certainty to relieve the worst troubles of indigestion and make a complete cure. That Mi-o-na will cure the worst forms of stomach trouble, cancer excepted, and give quick relief in indigestion is proven by the guarantee F. W. Jordan gives with every 50-cent box to refund the money unless Mi-o-na cures. A guarantee like this must inspire confidence. July 5-2t.

Household Hints

To remove the "shine" from a dark wool material sponge it with a solution of common washing blue and water and press it, while still damp, under a thin cloth. This is said to be a very efficacious treatment.

Very dirty chamois skins should be cleaned by rubbing soft soap into them and allowing them to soak for two hours; then rub till clean. Rinse in a weak solution of warm water, soda and yellow soap. Wring in a rough towel and dry quickly, pulling until soft.

When the woodwork in a room is being painted it is a good plan to have about three inches of the floor painted with the same color paint, then if ever it is necessary to put a carpet upon the floor which does not exactly fit it, the little space left will not be so unsightly.

Always wrap table or bed linen, or any other article of white goods, for that matter, which is to be stored away, in dark blue paper to keep it from turning yellow.

AFTER TEN YEARS

Mr. G. L. Stephenson, of Peterborough, Ont., says: "For over ten years I suffered constantly with Piles, first itching, then bleeding; pain almost unbearable; life a burden. Tried everything in vain till I used Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid."

"I had taken but a few doses when I began to notice an improvement and now, after using three boxes, I am glad to say I am completely cured. My general health has also greatly improved. It gives me great pleasure to recommend Hem-Roid to all sufferers with Piles, and I feel convinced that what it has done for me it will surely do for them."

COOKING HINTS BY EXPERTS

Two Famous Cooks Give Valuable Information About Corn Starch as a Cooking Help.

Comparatively few housewives realize how great is the virtue of corn starch as a help in cooking and baking. Alice Cary Waterman and Janet M. Hill, the famous culinary experts, have made a special study of this phase of cookery, with results that are not only interesting, but surprising.

As is well known, quality in corn starch is an all-important consideration, and the two cooks found Kingsford's Oswego Corn Starch to be the best for every purpose. For example, the use of this corn starch in bread results in a fine grain and delicious flavor, with a crust unusually tender. The experts found also that it greatly improves the consistency of soups, gravies and sauces, gives jellies a pleasing firmness for moulding, makes pastries more delicate, and so on through many helpful uses.

With a view to giving housewives everywhere the full benefit of this investigation, the National Starch Company, successors to the old firm of T. Kingsford & Son, Oswego, N. Y., have embodied the results in book form, which they are now distributing gratuitously among applicants. This book is unique in every respect, containing not only a great many original receipts but a carefully arranged list of helpful cooking hints and suggestions. There is little wonder that the demand for the book is enormous, for every woman interested in good cooking wants a copy.

G. B. Burbans Testifies After Four Years

G. B. Burbans, of Carlisle Center, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I wrote you stating that I had been entirely cured of a severe kidney trouble by taking less than two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure. It entirely stopped the brick dust sediment, and pain and symptoms of kidney disease disappeared. I am glad to say that I have never had a return of any of those symptoms during the four years that have elapsed and I am evidently cured to stay cured, and heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Cure to any one suffering from kidney or bladder trouble." Ed. D. Heckerman.

Cookery Caution

The modern cookbook, if of reliable authorship, can be depended upon implicitly so far as its recipes are concerned. But the time prescribed for the cooking of meats and vegetables is, almost invariably, too short. Inexperienced housewives with family baking and brewing on their hands will do well to make a generous allowance for this danger. Onions and beans among the vegetables, and veal, especially, among the meats, need thorough cooking. Roasted poultry, too, is often served underdone.

Do you really enjoy what you eat? Does your food taste good? Do you feel hungry and want more? Or do you have a heavy, dull feeling after meals, sour stomach, belching, gas on the stomach, bad breath, indigestion and dyspepsia? If so, you should take a little Kodol after each meal. Kodol will nourish and strengthen your digestive organs and furnish the natural digestive juices for your stomach. It will make you well. It will make your food do you good. Turn your food into good, rich blood. Kodol digests what you eat. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Lowering Lake Superior

One-half of the water supply of the Michigan-Lake Superior Water Company has been shut off because of the order of the Federal authorities, who make the claim that the level of Lake Superior is being lowered by the draughts of the company. The curtailment of the water has seriously interfered with the operation of the carbide plant at that point. The output of the latter has been cut down by one-half.

Bad sick headaches, biliousness or constipation are quickly relieved by DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Small pill, sure pill, safe pill—prompt and pleasant in action. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

The bites and stings of insects, tan, sunburn, cuts, burns and bruises are relieved at once with Pinesalve Carbolic. Acts like a poultice, and draws out inflammation. Try it. Price 25c. Sold at Irvine's Drug Store.

"There is a word of one syllable in the English language that is always spelled wrong, even by the most educated people."

"What is that?"

"The word 'wrong.'"

"Let me see," mused the sporting editor. "What is an incubator?"

"An incubator," replied the agricultural editor, "is an egg plant."

Discouragement is but disenchanting egotism.—Mazzini.

Quick Relief for Asthma Sufferers
Foley's Honey and Tar affords immediate relief to asthma sufferers in the worst stages and if taken in time will effect a cure. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Forbidden Games.

Almost every one of England's popular games has at one time or another been made illegal. Scotland is the home of golf, yet in 1457 the Scottish parliament passed an act entailing severe penalties on any one caught playing the game.

Edward III., Henry IV., and Henry VIII. all strongly objected to football, and Queen Elizabeth made it an offense punishable by imprisonment to play football. There is a record of sixteen people being imprisoned at once for breaking this law.

Football is still under a ban in some parts of the world. Two of the Swiss cantons refuse to allow it, and in Turkey it is absolutely illegal, and those who dare to play it are punished.

Among oddities of laws about games must be mentioned a French decree of the thirteenth century. By the king's command the gallants of the court were forbidden to play tennis "in their shirts." Whether his majesty of France insisted upon coats only or whether the unfortunate players were doomed to practice in complete suits of armor does not appear.—London Graphic.

Agriculture in Africa.

Excepting perhaps some Malayan tribes the African negroes are said to be the finest agriculturists of all the natural races. The Bongos are said to have a greater variety of garden plants around their huts than are found in the fields and gardens of a German village. Irrigation is practiced. The Angolas, in the Kongo district, have practical irrigation. The Wachangu show wonderful skill in irrigating their terraced hillsides by tunnels of water diverted from the main stream. "They have a clear mode of irrigating equally a given surface. As the little canals of water are always elevated above the cultivated plants, they will tap them at a convenient spot above the beds to be watered and then turn the stream into a rough conduit made of the hollow stems of bananas cut in half, the end of each stem overlapping the next. Then as the water enters the last joint it is freely turned right and left, distributing the vivifying stream in all directions."—Southern Workman.

Too Cold For Overcoats.

"You do not find any one wearing overcoats in Alaska, even in the winter," said a man from that territory. "The principal thing to be careful about is keeping the head, hands and feet warm. In that part of Alaska where I have been the only land transportation is by dog sleds, and to follow them one has to drop into a dog-trot beside the sled. An ordinary suit is plenty thick enough to keep you warm, and an overcoat is dangerous in that temperature. Trotting alongside a sled wearing an overcoat would make you perspire, and the bitter cold would freeze the perspiration. The men there wear a fur cap that covers every part of the head and face except the eyes, and there is only a little peephole for them. Wool lined mitts are worn on the hands and moccasins with woolen stockings on the feet."—Baltimore Sun.

Tragedy of a Wooden Leg.

A man who travels on a wooden leg says: "About the worst accident we ever heard of befalling a wooden legged man is the time one such unfortunate was going home after being to a late supper, along about 3 o'clock in the morning, when his leg went through an auger hole in the grub plank sidewalk, and he kept circling about that hole all night thinking he was going home. The editor of this paper wants it distinctly understood that we cannot vouch for the truthfulness of this story."—Kansas City Journal.

All the Same.

At one of the large north country churches recently a fashionably dressed lady happened to go into one of the private pews. The verger, who is known to be a very stern old chap, immediately bustled up to her and said:

"I'm afraid, miss, you'll have to cum out o' that. This is a paid pew."

"Sir," said the young lady, turning sharply round, "do you know who I am? I'm one of the Fifes."

"I dinna care," said the old man, "if you are the big drum. You'll have to cum out."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Dainty If Not Substantial.

The wife of a farmer had a sister come from Chicago to make a visit. One day the thrashers came, and the guest insisted on doing the work alone and sent her sister away to rest. When twenty-seven thrashers filed in to supper that night they found a sandwich tied with ribbon, one chicken croquette, one cheese ball the size of a marble and a buttonhole bouquet at each plate.—Emporia (Kan.) Gazette.

Long Sight.

The longest distance ever compassed by human vision is 183 miles, being the distance between the Uncompahgre park, in Colorado, and Mount Ellen, in Utah. This feat was accomplished by the surveyors of the United States coast and geodetic survey, who were engaged, in conjunction with representatives of other nations, in making a new measurement of the earth.

Cheerfulness.

The cheerful man's thought sculpts his face into one of kindness, touches his manner with grace and his business life with friendliness toward humanity.—Jacksboro (Tex.) Gazette.

Both Are There.

Teacher—Is there any connecting link between the animal and the vegetable kingdom? Bright Pupil—Yes, mum; there's hash.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Stale Bread of Hungary.

In Hungary they do not eat fresh bread. Whether it is because the Hungarians believe in hygiene more than their American or European brothers and sisters or not has never been told, but the Magyar is partial to stale bread, and the staler the better. His "roskenyer," or ordinary black bread, as it is eaten by the very large majority of the Magyar population, is carefully laid away on a shelf and dug out for consumption months and months after it has come out of the great ovens. If the huge loaf, weighing something like five pounds and for which the Hungarian pays 6 or 7 kreutzer, equivalent to about 3 or 4 cents in American money, has carefully been hidden away for two years, it is considered all the better. The Hungarian never thinks of where the bread is to come from tomorrow. He thinks of where it is to come from next year, for he has at least a year's supply on the shelves. The Hungarian bakes her bread 365 days ahead of time. Her Wednesday baking is for the Wednesday of a year to come; her Thursday baking for the Thursday of a year to come.

To Cut the Night in Two.

Professor Victor Hallopeau, member of the Paris Academy of Medicine, says:

The true secret of long continued, valuable brain work is to cut the night in two. The scholar, the inventor, the financier, the literary creator, should be asleep every night by 10 o'clock, to wake again at, say, 2 in the morning. Three hours' work, from 2 to 5, in the absolute tranquillity of the silent hours should mean the revealing of new powers, new possibilities, a wealth of ideas undreamed of under the prevailing system.

From 5 to 8 or 8:30 sleep again. Taking up then the day's work, the brain will be still saturated with the mental fruits of the midnight vigil; there will be no effort in putting into practice or carrying further what was planned or begun those few hours before.

The habit may be hard to acquire, but mechanical means of waking at first will induce the predisposition.—New York World.

The Military Death Sentence.

"You know how a soldier traitor is put to death," said the colonel. "The traitor stands blindfolded, and half a dozen privates shoot at him simultaneously. But perhaps you don't know that each of those privates, though he take the most careful aim, may afterward say without fear of contradiction that the traitor's blood does not stain his hands. This is the reason: Two of the rifles for this ghastly shooting are always loaded with blank cartridges. Then they are shuffled, and no one knows which the harmless ones are. The executioners draw, and each is as like as not to draw a harmless gun. So when they shoot they can solace themselves with the thought that maybe they are only shooting a blank cartridge at the poor blindfolded wretch before them."

Hans Breitmann's Philosophy.

I have found that if I resolve to be vigorous of body and mind, calm, collected, cheerful, etc., we can effect marvels, for it is certainly true that after awhile the spirit or will does haunt us unconsciously and marvelously. I have, I believe, half changed my nature under this discipline. I will continually be free from folly, envy, irritability and vanity, to forgive and forget, and I have found, by willing and often recurring to it, that, while far from being exempt from fault, I have eliminated a vast mass of it from my mind. It is certainly true, as Kant wrote to Hufeland, many diseases can be cured by resolving them away. He thought the goal could be.—Letters of Charles Godfrey Leland.

Time to Change.

It was at a table d'hôte dinner at a hill station in India that a very young officer just up from the plains found himself seated next to a lady whom he took for one of the grass widows common in those parts. He made himself agreeable, but his neighbor seemed a good deal out of spirits, so he said sympathetically:

"I suppose you can't help thinking of your poor husband grilling down below?"

But the lady was a real widow, and when he learned that he changed his seat.—London Answers.

Sparing the Smasher.

"I told you," said the merchant, "to mark this box 'Handle With Care.' What's this nonsense you've painted here?"

"That," said the college graduate, "is the Latin for 'Handle With Care.'"

"How do you expect a baggageman to understand that?"

"He won't and therefore he won't get mad and smash the box."—Philadelphia Press.

For Feminine Jurors.

In breach of promise cases the presence of female jurors among the male jurors would certainly benefit the men, as they would at once see through the wiles of their own sex, disconnect the picture hat and the pretty gown and disclose the hussy at heart in the pleading, innocent betrayed one.—Lady Violet Greville in London Opinion.

Superimposed.

In the hall of a philharmonic society the following notice was posted:

"The seats in this hall are for the use of the ladies. Gentlemen are requested to make use of them only after the former are seated."—El Riso.

PHILADELPHIA'S GREAT WEEK.

July 15 to 20, when the Elks hold their Annual Reunion in Philadelphia, will be a glorious week in the Quaker City. Not for years have such elaborate preparations been made to honor the City's guests as those which are now being made to welcome members of the Order, and to entertain the thousands who are expected to visit the city during the week.

A grand Court of Honor in Broad Street, the most magnificent structure of the kind ever erected in America, and costing $50,000, will be a great feature of the occasion. Every night during the week this Court of Honor, together with the City Hall, will be illuminated by myriads of electric lights of various colors.

On Wednesday, July 17, a massed band parade of over 2000 musicians will take place.

On Thursday, July 18, the Grand Parade of all visiting Elks will occur. Over 15,000 men from all sections of the country will participate. Each Lodge will have its own band and will wear a distinct uniform. Each uniform will typify the state or city represented by the lodge. Many of the uniforms will be historical and picturesque.

On Saturday, July 20, there will be a grand excursion to the seashore. Atlantic City, Cape May, Wildwood, Ocean City, Asbury Park, and other popular resorts are within easy reach of Philadelphia by the fast express trains of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Excursion tickets to Philadelphia will be sold July 13 to 17, inclusive, at reduced rates from stations over 100 miles from Philadelphia.

For exact fares and conditions of tickets, consult nearest Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agent.

Etiquette of Calling Cards

For a man the prefix "Mr." must always be used, unless he has a title, when that is, of course, correct.

But the wife of a professional man has simply his full name on her calling cards; not "Mrs. Dr." or "Mrs. Prof." Not even a military title is permissible for her own cards.

A widow continues to use her husband's Christian name, although if one wishes the maiden name may be resumed. This is not in best style, however, and is rarely done, except for reasons of business, perhaps, or something of the sort.

The prefix should be on the cards of all unmarried women, and also of girls as soon as they are old enough to have visiting cards. Where gifts are sent jointly by a man and his wife the double cards, or those of Mr. and Mrs. are to be used, as well as for the more formal calling. It is economy to have these cards, as one answers instead of two for the man, as two of his must be left unless the double one is used.
